THE invention of the Magee Plate Iron Furnace marked an era in the history of Hot Air Furnaces, inasmuch as it entirely revolutionized the trade wherever introduced. The leaky and defectively constructed Cast Iron Furnaces were practically driven from the market, and competitors were obliged to copy, as far as possible, the "Magee."

As a result the market is now overrun with "Wrought Iron" Furnaces, all claimed to be the "best," and manufactured by parties who a few years ago were loud in their denunciation of wrought or plate iron as a radiator.

Notwithstanding the unprecedented popularity and success of this Furnace (nearly 10,000 having been sold) the inventive genius of MR. MAGEE has not been idle, and the correct principle of its construction to insure economy, heating capacity and durability, having been fully demonstrated, he has sought to add such conveniences for use and improvements in its material construction as should place it "par excellence" far in advance of all competition.

To embody his complete idea an entirely new Furnace was necessary, and, consequently, during the past year, we produced the MAGEE "STANDARD" PLATE IRON FURNACE, and it was at once pronounced by competent judges to be the "most complete heating apparatus ever made."

Notwithstanding the prevailing depression in general business the demand for the Magee Furnaces has been fully equal to former years, and in no case, where properly set, have they failed to give complete satisfaction.

This fact alone establishes their superiority, and it is hardly necessary to add anything further in their praise.

The strong and very noticeable points of the Standard Furnace are, First—The simplicity of its construction. Second—The ease with which it can be cared for, cleaned out, and repaired when necessary. Third—The perfect mechanism of all its parts, even to the smallest details. Fourth—The arrangements for insuring the greatest possible economy of fuel consistent with the needed amount of heat. These features may be perceived by a simple examination of the Furnace, and for evidence of their practical value, and of the Durability, Healthfulness and general Efficiency of the MAGEE "STANDARD" PLATE IRON FURNACE, we beg leave to refer to any of the many thousands who have them in successful use to-day.

"Standard" Plate Iron Furnace.

No. 24.	" " " " 25 in.	200	" " 5 ft. 6 in.

Directions for setting the Magee Standard Plate Iron Furnace in Brick work.

First. Lay a foundation of brick or cement and place the base thereon, as shown in above cut; put the grate in its place and fill the joints on top of base with stove putty, then put on the heavy cast iron ring; next place the fire-pot in position, and line it with the fire brick, then put on the plate iron radiator, first packing the joints in base ring, and attach it firmly to base by means of rods provided for that purpose, then bolt on the front shield and automatic gas draft.

The furnace is now complete and the brick wall may be built as shown above, or the outer wall may be circular in form, leaving a space of about two inches between it and the inner wall; the latter should be about six inches from the radiator of the furnace, and should be plastered both on the inner and outer surfaces.

Cold air should be introduced from the North or West side of the house if possible and carried directly to the inner chamber at the bottom of the furnace; this insures a quick and constant circulation. The cold air box or conductor should be from 12 x 20 to 12 x 24 inches square, according to the size of the furnace, and should always be provided with a damper or slide with which to regulate the supply of air.

Leave an arched space in the inner wall opposite the clean out door at the rear of the furnace, and set the man hole door in the outer wall adjoining, as shown above. Build the walls level with the top of the furnace before setting in the pipes and have all side pipes on a line with each other. After continuing the inner wall ten inches (on larger sizes twelve inches is better) above the furnace, attach an inverted cone of galvanized iron, put on covering bars and brick over, or a lining of bright tin laid over the bars may be used instead of the galvanized iron cone; cover over the outer wall leaving same space as on the sides. On the front above the shield, but one wall is required.

No. 18—No. 20—No. 22—No. 24 and No. 30.

No. 30. Diameter of fire-pot lined, 26 inches. Height of Furnace, cased, 6 ft. 8 in.
Other sizes are same dimensions as with Galvanized iron casing.

WE present on the opposite and last page engravings of "THE STANDARD," as arranged for our patent casing, and we desire to call your especial attention to its merits.

The outer casing (Figs. 1-1-1) is of a patented non-conducting material, resembling terra-cotta, and is very neatly ornamented; the inner casing (Figs. 2-2) is of the same material, though of less thickness, and plainly finished. The space between the two permits a constant circulation of air, which, as it becomes heated, rises and passes off through the pipe, (Fig. 17,) to warm any room desired, thus utilizing the heat that in all other furnaces is wasted in the cellar.

These casings are moulded in slabs, are very strong, and can be easily transported. They are much more effective than sheet iron, and accomplish the object of a brick set furnace, at less expense, without the trouble and annoyance of masonry.

Another new and excellent feature, is the cone in connection with the movable cast collars, (Fig). 4-4-4.) These collars, which are of all sizes, are cast on the inner casing, and project through the outer. They can be moved to any desired position, and render all measurements, except for elevation, wholly unnecessary. All furnace men can appreciate this convenience.

Fig. 5 represents the Automatic Flame and Gas Draft,—a new and very convenient appendage peculiar to the Standard furnaces. On closing the feed door, (Fig. 7,) the little projection at the top strikes its equivalent on the hanging door, (Fig. 6,) and closes that also. Whenever the feed door is opened, the hanging draft door drops of its own weight, and any flame or gas which might (under certain conditions of the fire chamber) 'puff' into the cellar, is drawn up into the pipe, and passes to the chimney.

In the feed door is placed a small mica window, which is protected by a cast iron shield within, (Fig. 8.) The condition of the fire can thus be ascertained without opening the door. Figs. 9-9 represent the evaporating pan, with door, and Fig. 10, an aperture opening into the fire-pot, by means of which the accumulated slate and clinkers can easily be removed from the grate and linings. Fig. 16 represents the stopper for closing the same. The grate is constructed with a follower, and is shaken and dumped with all doors tightly closed, so that no dust can escape in the cellar. The fire-pot castings are mounted so as to form an air chamber around the fire-pot proper, for the purpose of supplying the fire at different points with sufficient air to consume the gases. This chamber is fed through the aperture (Fig. 11,) and forms a most efficient gas burning arrangement.

Two doors at the front (Figs. 14.14,) and one at the back of the furnace, afford easy and complete access to the flues, for the purpose of cleaning them out when necessary. Fig. 13 represents the regulating box, which can be placed on either side of the front at pleasure. Figs. 3-3 show the plate iron radiator, Figs. 20-20 the cast iron standards which hold the outer casing slabs in position, and Fig. 18 the direct draft which attaches with a matched collar for convenience.

The foregoing description (except that having direct reference to the casing) is applicable to all of our Standard Furnaces, whether for setting in Brick work, or for casing in Galvanized iron.

THE MAGEE FURNACE COMPANY.

From a large file, we have selected the following letters received by us from well known gentlemen residing in different parts of the country, and whose testimony is unimpeachable. Please read their opinion of the Magee Standard Furnace.

4 CHESTNUT ST., CHELSEA, March 6, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO., BOSTON:

Gents,—It gives me great pleasure to testify to the superior advantages of the Magee Furnace bought of you last Fall.

Previous to purchasing I had examined every other kind of any prominence, and had weighed carefully the opinions and decisions of all my friends using furnaces of different makes in the market. I decided in favor of the "Magee," and the satisfaction which it has given during the past winter proves the wisdom of the choice.

I find its chief recommendations to be, great heating capacity, simplicity of construction so that the care is almost nothing, economy in the use of coal, and freedom from gas in the house, a serious fault with most of the furnaces into whose workings I inquired.

The coldest days of the season have not reduced the temperature below 68 degrees, and this without driving and with the whole house open. In fact it has been a neighborhood remark, that the windows of my house were the only ones in the vicinity free from frost on the cold mornings. I would say here that the furnace is the No. 22, not a large one, and the house in a locality exposed to the cold winds in every direction.

As a relief to the trouble and care of four or five stoves, as a comfort in keeping your house warm and pleasant, and as a matter of economy in the saving of coal, I must cheerfully commend the Magee Furnace, believing that it will accomplish all these ends and more too.

Yours very truly,

WILLIAM SHILLABER.

CHELSEA, MASS., March 3, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE COMPANY:

The Furnace you put in my house last fall, has more than met my expectations, as I have been able, even with the thermometer at twelve degrees below to keep the entire house at seventy degrees above, and this in an exposed position, while during the warmer weather, by the proper use of the check damper. we have been able to control the fire and keep the temperature of the house uniform.

The arrangements for shaking, cleaning, and carrying off the gases when the door is opened, are the best I have ever seen, and in common with many of my friends I must say, it seems as if you had attained as near perfection as possible with your present style of Furnace.

Yours truly,

C. A. CAMPBELL.

BOSTON, March 4, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO., BOSTON:

Gentlemen,—The Standard Furnace which you put into my house last Fall gives me entire satisfaction. With it I am able to heat twice the number of rooms comfortably, that with my old one of another make I could heat uncomfortably.

It is easily managed; allows practically no escape of gas; makes much or little heat as I choose; and I would not exchange it for any other kind of Furnace that I know of.

Yours truly,

HENRY N. SHELDON.

BOSTON, March 1, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gentlemen,—Several years since I put one of your medium size Portable Furnaces into the house in which I then lived, and it proved satisfactory in every respect. Having occasion in the summer of 1875 to renew the heating apparatus in the house which I now occupy, after giving the matter careful consideration, I selected one of your large size Brick Furnaces, and it has proved the most satisfactory heater that I have ever had.

In fact, with a slight change which I propose to make in the cold-air-box, I think it will be as near perfect as any Furnace can be. It sifts its own ashes, and is very easy to feed and regulate. By means of a couple of wires connected with the drafts the heat can be completely controlled in the front hall above, and there is no occasion for going to the Furnace itself from morning till night, no matter whether more or less heat is wanted.

I have used other Furnaces than the Magee, and have put still others into new houses, where they have worked satisfactorily, but if I were called upon to choose, I should unhesitatingly take yours, since I regard it as the best.

Yours, respectfully,

C. A. RICHARDSON,

Managing Editor of the Congregationalist.

BOSTON, March 7, 1876

THE MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents.—Having tried several kinds of Furnaces before that which you put in my Studio, I am willing and happy to testify that your Furnace is the best. It consumes less coal, warms up more quickly, is more easily managed and cleanlier, than any others I have tried. Knowing what a nuisance a bad Furnace is, and what a comfort a good one is, I write this as I should say it, if any one asked my opinion.

WALTER SMITH,

State Director of Art Education, Mass.

BOSTON, March 6, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—I was advised by friends, when about to put in a new Furnace, to try yours; I did so, and am pleased with the result. Your Furnace has exceeded my greatest expectations, and the past season has given me abundant opportunity to test it.

It is easy regulated, free from gas, and ashes, which characterizes many other Furnaces. I can cheerfully recommend it to all in want of the best Furnace.

Yours respectfully, J. E. STILL.

Firm of Dexter Bros.

BOSTON, March 1, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—In reply to yours of the 29th February, I would state that I have used a Magee Furnace for the past fourteen years, and have always been pleased with its operation; the same Furnace is now in use. A year ago, requiring another Furnace, I put into my house one of your later patterns, the Standard. This Furnace possesses all the merits you claim for it, and I willingly recommend and endorse it.

Yours truly,

CUTLER DOWNER.

Firm of Stone & Downer.

WESTON, MASS., March 25, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO., BOSTON:

Gents,—After carefully considering the quality of your Portable Furnace and its mechanical structure, I had one placed in the Parsonage of the Baptist Society, last winter. It affords me pleasure to be able to say that it does the work of three stoves. It is economical, easily managed and more than meets what you claimed for it. The Furnace being the only one in Town of the kind, many persons have called and examined its workmanship and capacity for heating, and are unanimous in their commendation of it. I most emphatically recommend it to any party desirous of obtaining in every respect a superior Portable Furnace.

Yours respectfully,

AMOS HARRIS.
Pastor Baptist Church.

NEWTONVILLE, March 13, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gentlemen,—The Central Congregational Church, Newtonville, having been enlarged during the past summer, and additional heating apparatus being required, the Committee having the matter in charge, gave considerable attention to the subject, hoping if possible to find a Furnace that would give a large and uniform heat, from a moderate amount of coal, and care, and finally decided in favor of the Magee Standard Furnace, as arranged and located by Mr. O. B. Leavitt, of this place. The Furnace fully meets our expectations, and is perfectly satisfactory. We fully indorse and recommend it.

J. WESLEY KIMBALL,
Chairman of the Building Committee.
EDWIN W. VOSE, Sexton.

BOSTON, March 3, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—Your "Improved" Furnace of which I was fortunate in selecting last fall, has more than proved satisfactory, and I consider it the best I have seen, and am pleased in recommending it to the consideration of my friends.

Yours, very truly,

F. W. MASTERS.

BOSTON, March 18, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gentlemen,—In reply to your desire for my opinion of your Furnace I will say, that your improved Furnace, put into my house last Fall, has given me great satisfaction. The arrangement for carrying off the gas, when the feed door is open so it does not escape into the cellar, is most excellent.

My experience in connection with Furnaces for the last twelve years has given me a knowledge of the practical working of most kinds sold in this market, and I will say that yours is the best of any to my knowledge.

Truly yours,

GILMAN JOSLIN.

DEDHAM, March 10, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—I am pleased to state that the Magee Furnace you set in my house last Fall has proved perfectly satisfactory, and I can recommend it to the public as being worthy of my endorsement.

Respectfully yours,

WM. AMES, 2D.

WALPOLE, N. H., Feb. 23, 1876.

MR. B. P. OWEN, Agent Magee Furnace Co.:

Sir,—I had a letter from Connecticut last season, which came to me as Committee of the Congregational Church and Society, asking if we liked the Magee Furnaces that we have in our Church, and if so, why; and if we were satisfied that they were as good as any kind. My reply was, that they gave perfect satisfaction, were very easy to manage, and seemed to be all that we could wish. In regard to being as good or better than others, I cannot say, but as far as my judgment serves me, when anything is satisfactory and does all that any person wishes, that is about as much as can be expected.

I have one in my house that I have used about two winters, and I would not exchange it for any Furnace that I have heard of yet, because I am satisfied with the one I have. I run it just six months the Winter of 1874 and 1875, which was a good Winter to test it, and used five to five and a half tons of coal.

Yours truly,

E. K. SEABURY.

HALLOWELL, ME., Feb. 20, 1876.

TO MR. JAMES ATKINS, JR., Agt., of Magee Furnace Co.:

Dear Sir,—I have used your Plate Iron Furnace the past season, and find it one that works to perfection, and satisfactory in every particular.

J. R. BODWELL,
President Hallowell Granite Co.

THOMASTON, ME., Feb. 23, 1876.

J. HENDERSON & CO.:

Gents,—I am using in my house and store the Magee Furnace, and consider it superior to any Furnace in the market.

Yours truly, E. K. O'BRIEN.

EASTHAMPTON, MASS., March 13th, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO., BOSTON, MASS.:

Gentlemen,—Since writing you the 11th, we have seen Rev. R. I. Donovan; he says, (without any solicitation on our part,) write the Magee Furnace Co. that their Standard Wrought Iron Furnace is the best heater in every respect that I have ever seen. His house is a very cold one, and situated in a very bleak and windy place, exposed to all hard winds.

Previous to putting in a Furnace he could not heat one room comfortable, by running a large Stove, and also a Grate; now he says, his house is comfortable from cellar to attic, and there is no dust or gas, or any trouble with Stoves, but everything is clean, and always warm.

Yours, respectfully,

W. N. SHANDREW & CO.

EASTHAMPTON, March 16, 1876.

MESSRS. W. N. SHANDREW & CO.:

The No. 20 Standard Furnace that you put into my house in October last, gives me entire satisfaction for the following reasons:—1st. It is economical in the consumption of fuel for the amount of heat required. 2d. It allows no gas or dust to escape into the house. 3d. It is so easy to manage—requiring but a few moments of care each day. The fire started by you at that time has not been out.

From my experience in a number of Furnaces I should give the Standard the preference.

Yours, respectfully,

J. W. WILSON.
Supt. of National Button Co.'s Works.

WALNUT ST., BROOKLINE, MASS., March, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—Yours came to hand enquiring of me about my Furnace. I went to Brookline to live in 1864, and found one of your No. 5 Furnaces in the house, and found it too small,—having 15 rooms. In 1866 I put in one of your larger size, finding that did not burn any more coal than I did in the small one, and with better results from the same amount of coal. Last Summer I put in one of your new kind, and one still larger than before, and I have not burnt any more coal, but have had better results than ever. I cannot say too much in its praise. I also have one of your Cooking Stoves and it is very satisfactory to me.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN TOWNSEND.

Office, 27 Doane St., Boston.

MARBLEHEAD, March 7, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Dear Sirs,—After a most thorough inspection of all the prominent Furnaces offered for sale in this market, I gave your Standard the preference. From a most severe test of its heating power and economic qualities, I am satisfied that it more than confirms my judgment in the selection. I have warmed three rooms and a hall extending through three stories, since the Furnace was put in (Nov. 1st,) and have consumed but three and one-half tons of coal thus far, and the whole space has been warmed to my entire satisfaction. I consider it by far the best Furnace that has yet been offered to the public.

Yours truly,

ELBRIDGE BROWN.

HUDSON, MASS., March 2, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—I am perfectly satisfied with my Furnace, the Magee Standard. Truly yours,

F. D. BRIGHAM,

Treasurer Hudson Savings Bank.

MARBLEHEAD, March 13, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—Having determined in the past winter to place a Furnace in my house, I asked for estimates from you and another Boston party, each of whom had Furnaces set in this vicinity, and although your estimate was the highest, I decided to take your Furnace believing it to be the best. It has fulfilled my expectations in every particular, proving all you represented it to be, and you should not fail in securing a customer in every person wishing to get the best Furnace.

Yours, truly,

WM. C. LEFAVOUR.

EASTHAMPTON, MASS., February 21, 1876.

MESSRS. W. N. SHANDREW & CO.:

Gentlemen,—Through your influence I had one of Magee's Standard Portable Furnaces set in my house last October, and it affords me great satisfaction to inform you that the Furnace is all, and in fact, more than I expected, and I can conscientiously recommend your Furnace to all who want a good article.

Yours, very respectfully,

J. E. CLARK,

Agent New Haven and Northampton R. R.

BOSTON, March 2, 1876.

THE MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gentlemen,—I purchased one of your Furnaces last Autumn, and am happy to inform you that it has proved satisfactory in every way. My house is one that requires considerable power in the Furnace, and it was never so well, nor so economically heated as it has been this winter.

Very truly yours,

H. W. SMITH,

Of The Smith American Organ Co.

BOSTON, March 11, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gentlemen,—The Portable Plate Iron Furnace which you put into my house last Fall, has proved perfectly satisfactory.

Yours truly,

JAMES HAMMETT.

EVERETT, March 6, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your communication asking my opinion of your Furnace I will say, that the "Magee Standard," which I am now using, is the fourth Furnace with which I have attempted to heat my house, and is, I think, about as near perfect as a Furnace well can be. It is very easy to manage, and every pound of coal used gives a proportionate amount of heat in the rooms,—the atmosphere being always perfectly pure.

Respectfully, S. P. FISKE.

STONEHAM, MASS., March 8, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gentlemen,—You ask my opinion of the Furnace which you furnished me with at the beginning of Winter. I am happy to say that it has worked most satisfactorily. Without much expenditure of coal it has made my house most comfortable, even during the coldest snaps. In recommending your Furnace to my friends I shall consider myself as doing them a favor. From this you can see the opinion I have formed of it.

I am, Gentlemen,

Very truly yours,

REV. D. J. O'FARRELL.

NORTH CAMBRIDGE, March 7, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gentlemen,—In reply to yours of the 29th ult. I would say, that the Furnace put in by you last Fall, has worked well, and proved all that you claimed for it. From my experience with two other different Furnaces, I give yours the preference, and am satisfied to recommend it to any one wanting a good Furnace.

Yours, respectfully,

WM. H. SHERMAN.

Of Parker, Wilder & Co.

DEDHAM, March 2, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—I take pleasure in expressing my entire satisfaction in the working of the Magee Furnace put in my house last Autumn. It is easily regulated to produce a large or small amount of heat, causes no trouble from gas or dust, and is economical in consumption of fuel. I would also cheerfully testify to the thorough and careful manner in which every detail of the piping. &c., was done. The Furnace which you have more recently put in the Unitarian Church here, works admirably also.

Respectfully yours,

NATHANIEL SMITH.

BRATTLEBORO', April 23, 1876.

MESSRS. WOOD & MARSHALL:

Gents,—The Magee Portable Wrought Iron Furnace you put into my house two years ago is the easiest managed Furnace I ever used. We have no gas or dust. I can run a good fire in it forty-eight hours without going near it; I recommend it to all who want a good heater, and economical in fuel, to purchase the Magee Furnace.

FRANK W. HARRIS,
R. R. Contractor and Builder.

BOSTON, May 18, '76.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Sirs,—In reply to your favor asking my opinion of your Standard Furnace, I can only state that, having used one in my house at Jamaica Plain, I am satisfied that for economy of coal, capacity for heating, and freedom from gas and impure airs, it is as much superior to any other Furnace as the ideas of its construction are different.

Very respectfully yours,

S. S. RIDDELL.

CHICOPEE, March 28, 1876.

HENRY COGSWELL, ESQ.:

Dear Sir,—In reply to your enquiry concerning the Furnace which you placed in my house nearly two years since, I have this to say:—

It will not heat my house so as to make it comfortably warm without fuel, and in very cold weather it consumes a good quantity. But it is equal to the work, and in the coldest weather I have not found it necessary to put on the direct, full draft, for any length of time; and nearly the whole time, in fact the ordinary state in which we keep it, is, to have the damper which lets the air into the smoke pipe, thrown back one notch. And in mild weather, I can manage it so as to consume but very little coal, with no trouble from gas.

I have had no experience with any other kind of Furnace and possibly am not prepared to judge,—but from what I can learn from those who have used, or are using, other kinds, I have no wish to change the Magee Standard for any other.

On the whole, I can say, after a trial of two winters, that I am not only pleased, but delighted with it, and would earnestly recommend it as preferable to any within my knowledge.

Yours, truly,

REV. E. B. CLARK,
Former Pastor 1st Cong'l Society, Chicago.

CHICOPEE, May 8, 1876.

HENRY COGSWELL, ESQ.:

Dear Sir,—This is to certify that the "Magee" Furnace placed by you in our Masonic Hall, last fall, has given entire satisfaction.

We beleive it to be the best made Furnace in the market, consequently quite free from dust and gas, a great consideration in the selection of a Furnace! We believe it to be economical for the work required of it, and quite easy of management.

To those desiring a Furnace, we can cheerfully recommend it.

Yours, truly,

CHICOPEE MASONIC LODGE,
Per N. Whittier.

PAWTUCKET, April 20, 1876.

MESSRS. E. P. CARPENTER & CO.:

Gents,—Having used the Magee Standard Furnace the past winter, I have several times expressed myself, to my friends, as perfectly satisfied with it. The tenement I occupy is quite large—the rooms high (eleven feet clear), the halls spacious and somewhat exposed to the cold, and yet there has been no difficulty in keeping them comfortable, with a reasonable amount of coal. With the improved conveniences for "shaking it down," and for removing "clinkers," the labor in running the Furnace has not been at all difficult, and during the winter season there has been no occasion for "dumping" it.

The several Furnaces previously used by me have been good, but none of them has suited me so well, on the whole, as the Magee Standard Furnace.

Yours, truly,

H. A. PHILBROOK,
Pastor of the High St. Universalist Church and Congregation.

GUILFORD, VT., April 24, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gentlemen,—I have one of your Furnaces, number 6 1-2, put into my house two years ago, and it works entirely satisfactory, heating the whole house. The lower rooms are eleven feet high—chambers, nine feet six inches. The rooms on lower floor are very large, four of them 14x20, and hall, 8x28 feet. The house is exposed on all sides, being in the country. Before putting in the "Magee," I had one of "Henderson," No. 3,—and tried it thoroughly, three winters, and it would not heat one room comfortable in a very cold day. With yours we never have failed to have all the heat we want the coldest days, and the amount of Fuel used, compared with the "Henderson," is one third less., and it is very simple and easy to care for. I take pleasure in recommending it.

Very respectfully,

J. L. SIMONDS,
Sup't Bickford Knitting Machine Co.

BRATTLEBORO', VT., April, 1876.

MESSRS. WOOD & MARSHALL:

Gents,—The Magee Wrought Iron Furnace you put into my house, three winters ago, proves to be as good as recommended by you. Having used a number of other Furnaces which I called good, I think this the best, so easily managed, and so economical of Fuel. It is a great heater. I have seven registers, and will heat my whole house with ease in the coldest weather.

F. H. HARRIS,
Builder.

AUBURN, ME., May 2, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—I have set your new Standard Furnace in a Church, a School House and in private dwellings, and in every instance it has given perfect satisfaction.

I have set Furnaces for the last twenty years, and I consider the Standard Furnace the best Furnace that I have ever set.

Very truly,

S. S. HERSEY.

We have sought the opinion of some of the oldest, most practical, and best known furnace dealers in New England, as to the merits of the Standard Furnace, and we print below the replies received. From obvious reasons their testimony is entitled to great consideration, and they are eminently capable of forming a correct judgement.

WORCESTER, April 29, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—Having sold your Furnaces for the last twenty years, and learning that you were about to issue a new catalogue, I wish to add my testimony to the numerous recommendations you already have:

For the many excellent qualities which the Magee Furnaces possess I can conscientiously vouch. I consider it with no exception the best Down Draft Base Heating Furnace in the market. I have tried many other Furnaces hoping to get its equal for less money, but in every case the experiment has failed to prove satisfactory to me. Whenever I have had to take out a new Furnace because it failed to give the expected satisfaction, I have always put in the Magee. This I have had to do in many instances and the Magee Furnace always remedies the evil. Your Standard Plate Iron Furnace I regard to be the best made, best working, and the best heating Down Draft Furnace ever offered to the trade. It has many fine points of merit and convenience not found in any other; among which I would particularly mention the Anti-Clinker Grate, the mode of shaking and dumping the grate, the ease with which it can be cleaned, the arrangements for carrying off all gas and smoke when one opens the Furnace door, and the various other little matters which go to make up a perfect Furnace. Hoping that in the future, as in the past, your Furnace will fully meet the wants of the public, I remain,

Most respectfully yours,

J. W. JORDAN.

PROVIDENCE, May 1, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gentlemen.—I wish to give my testimony as to my experience with the working of your Wrought Iron Furnace. I have put in operation a large number of Furnaces from different manufacturers, but must candidly say that I never had such good results from the same amount of fuel as I have had from the Magee. Besides, they are so easily managed that the most ignorant help, after one lesson, can run them successfully, and those that have them in use are not troubled by the coal-dust coming into the rooms, or the dry unpleasant air that a large number of Furnaces have that are in the market.

As a powerful and economical heater, and for finish of castings and thoroughness of construction, there is not a Furnace in the market that will approach the Magee Wrought Iron Furnace.

Respectfully yours,

WM. MILLEN.

LOWELL, May, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—In answer to your inquiry, would say that I consider the Magee Furnace the best made for ordinary use.

Having been in the Furnace business more than twenty years I have had an opportunity to personally test nearly all kinds, and must say that for Economy of Fuel, and Ease in Management, the Standard Plate Iron Furnace leads them all.

It is also, in my opinion, the most thoroughly constructed Furnace in the market.

Yours, truly, N. J. WIER & CO.

CHICOPEE, MASS., May 1, 1876.

MR. A. N. PARLIN, Treas. M. F. Co.:

Dear Sir,—Yours of April 28th received; am very happy to respond to your invitation to express my opinion in regard to your Furnaces—the "Standard" and "Magee."

I have sold them three years, and my sales the past year are three times that of any other year; they are working finely and give perfect satisfaction. All are ready to endorse all and more than you ever guarantee. My experience of over twenty-five years as a practical man in Furnace work gives me a right of judgment, and I do not hesitate to say I think they excel any and all other Furnaces manufactured.

Entirely free from gas, and a most powerful heater, I would most heartily recommend them to any one in need of an economical and healthy heating apparatus.

Mr. Sherman, for whom I set the first one, says "tell them the best thing you possibly can and I'll put my name to it, for they beat everything."

Very respectfully,

HENRY COGSWELL.

NEW HAVEN, May 9, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gentlemen,—In reply to your letter, would say that having had the pleasure of introducing your Magee Plate Iron Furnace or Standard, we find by closely following the working and the general principles of it, and the perfect satisfaction that it gives to my customers that have used them, that it is a pleasure to put them up, with the assurance that nothing but praise for the Furnace can be the result. We cordially recommend it to all in want of a Furnace.

Yours, respectfully, S. E. DIBBLE.

HALLOWELL, May 4, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—I have been using and selling the Furnaces made by the Magee Furnace Co. (the Magee and Standard) for several years, and cheerfully recommend them to be first-class Furnaces in every respect, and have given the best of satisfaction in every case where I have set one up, and think there is no Furnace in the market that will meet the wants of the public generally as well as the Magee Furnace.

Truly yours,

JAMES ATKINS, JR.

NASHUA, N. H., March 6, 1876.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.:

Gents,—You will find enclosed a few of the names of those who are using the Magee Portable Furnace in this city.

We have visited most of them before giving you their names and find but one opinion about them, and that is—general satisfaction.

Having sold and set in operation quite a number of different kinds of Furnaces, we feel fully convinced that the "Wrought Iron" Magee is as good as any in the market—and when we consider the great difficulty there is in giving perfect satisfaction with any heating apparatus, we feel fully satisfied with the result we have attained with the Magee Furnace.
